

PRESS RELEASE

23rd August 2010

Moko Chocolates opens for Business!

Moko Chocolates, the mail order chocolates firm officially opened its website for business today. Moko is a sister company of Bunches.co.uk, which has been sending fresh flowers by post for over 21 years from its base in Nottinghamshire. The new confectionary company sells quality Belgian chocolates and has a separate identity from Bunches with a fun, quirky tone of voice, appealing to a wider audience.

Dan Turner, Commercial Manager at Moko Chocolates commented; "The original chocolate-by-post concept came from Bunches founders Erik and Sandra Hoving over 15 years ago. It's been really exciting to lead the project over the last 12 months and for the team to finally see it through to fruition this August."

Dan continues; "Although Moko Chocolates has its own individual personality and branding, it is built on the wealth of knowledge gained from Bunches' 21 years of trading. Moko has inherited the same innovative, quality-led culture and ethical trading principles as Bunches, which we are confident will see it experience the same level of success."

Moko Chocolates start from £11.99, include free first class U.K. postal delivery and a personal greeting; all sent out in standard letterbox-friendly gift boxes which provide a safe home for the chocolate treats during transit.
